[Correspondence of the New York Tribune] WASHINGTON, April 20, 1865.—The following is the history of the authority recently given for the assembling of the Rebel Legislainre of Virginia. While President Lincoln was in Richmond he was waited upon by Judge John A. Campbell, who observed:

"I had an interview with Jefferson Davis, Benjamin and Breckinridge just before they left, and said to them: The military power of the Confederacy is broken. Its independence is hopeless. It only remains for us to make the best terms we can. The trouble is, the President of the United States cannot enter into negotiations with you; but he does recogregular authorities. Under the doctrine of State Rights, so universally held in the South. the troops from Virginia—the Confederate Government being a fugitive—will recognize the right of the Virginia Legislature to control them. If you, Mr. Lincoln will permit that body to convene, it will doubtless recall them from the field." Comptell's arguments for this course were many and specious. The President was actuated by his absorbing desire for peace to listen attentively; but he said: "Judge Campbell, let us have no misunderstanding. I will give you once more, in black and white, my only terms." And he immedi-ately wrote the same propositions which Mr. Seward took from him to the Hampton Roads Conference:

I. The territorial integrity of the Republic. II. No retraction of Executive or Congressional action on the subject of slavery.

III No armistice. To these he added a fourth condition, that, if leading Confederates still persisted in the war, now it had become so utterly hopeless, their property should be reientlessly confis-Usmpbell prayed for a modification of the third article, but the President was immov-

He said: "We will not negotiate with men as long as they are fighting against us. The last election established this as the deliberate determination of the country.'

On the steamboat which brought Mr. Lincoln down the James river he wrote this order to Gen. Weitzel: "You will permit the persons who call themselves the Virginia Legislature to convene in Richmond, for the purpose of withdrawing the Virginia troops from the rebel army, but you will not allow them to use any treasonable language, or adopt any treasonable Without consulting with any person what. ever, or advising any one of its contents, he sealed this document and sent it to General Weitzel by a United States Senator. But, on the very day of his death, he re-ceived a letter from Judge Campbell, tinged with the usual rebel insolence, ignoring altogether the preposition which the President had made to him in writing, and urging: "It is true that the military power of the Confederacy is destroyed, but the spirit of the Southern people still remains unbroken. If you want to concillate them it will be wise for you to grant an armistice, and necessary for you to treat leniently their leading public men, and seek their assistance!" This was too much even for Mr. Lincoln's good nature. He characterized Campbell's course as ungrateful and outrageous. Meanwhile, the capitulation of General Lee obviated the necessity of convening the rebel Legislature, and he sent an order countermanding the

One of the President's last efficial acts was a deed of mercy toward his enemies. He expressly stated that he meant to give the leading Confederates an opportunity to leave the country. This despatch from Port Royal came to Washington: "Beverly Tucker and Jacob Thompson will be here to-morrow in disguise, to leave on the steamer for Europe. What shall we do?"

Mr Lincoln directed the authorities to let them go. A few hours later he fell by the assassin's bullet, and beside his death-bed a member of the Cabinet countermanded that order. Fortunately for their own lives, Thompson and Tucker did not come into the United States after the conspirators had murdered the only man who could have saved them

Mr. Seward exhibits wonderful vitality, but his physicians have little hope that his mouth will ever recover its symmetry. It is likely to be awry, and probably power will be lack-ing entirely to close the lower jaw. Several days since the Secretary, with characteristic unselfishness, wrote upon a slate: "For myself I care nothing; but the people should have been more watchful for their President." Evidence discloses that there were ten conspirators in the plot; that at a meeting held in Memphis they selected by lot the assassin of the President. Our authorities have a letter which says: "It becomes your happy lot to destroy this tyrant. You can select the cup, the blade or the bullet, but you know the cup has once been tried, and it failed."

Letter from J. B. Booth to J. W. Booth. WASHINGTON, April 22 -A letter received at Ford's Theater, directed to J. Wilkes Booth, has been handed to the police. It is in the bandwriting of Junius Brutus Booth, and is simply signed "Jun." The writer speaks significantly of the oil business, and advises young Booth to abandon it now that Richmond has been given up and Lee has surrendered, as his friends believe it will not be profitable. A postscript signed "Alice" is appended, giving Booth similar advice.

It is stated that J. Wilkes Booth studied law in the office of the late Judge Buel, Troy, about ten years ago. He remained there but a short

Letter from the "Asa Trenchard" of the Tragedy.
[From the Chicago Journal.]

Mr. William J. Hawke, of this city, who resides at No. 254 State street, has received a letter from his son Harry, who is a member of Laura Keene's theatrical company, who were playing "Our American Cousin at Ford's Theatre, in Washington on the night of the horrid tragedy. He gives some new facts in reference to the assassination and the assassin. We are permitted to publish the letter, which is Washington, Sunday, April 16 .- This is the first opportunity I have had to write to you since the assassination of our dear Pres. ident on Friday night, as I have been in custody nearly ever since. I was one of the prin-cipal witnesses of that sad affair, being the only one on the stage at the time of the tatal shot I was playing "Asa Trenchard," in the "American Cousin." The "old lady" of the theatre had just gone off the stage, and I was answering her exit speech when I heard the shot fired. I turned, looked up at the President's box, heard the man exclaim, "Sic Semper Tyrannui," saw him jump from the box, seize the flag on the staff and drop to the stage: he slipped when he gained the stage; but he got upon his feet in a moment, brandished a large knife, saying, "The South shall be free!" turned his face in the direction I stood, and I recognized him as John Wilkes Booth. He ran towards me, and I seeing the knife, thought I was the one he was after, ran off the stage and up a flight of stairs. He made his escape out of a door, directly in the rear of the theatre, mounted a horse and rode off. The above all occurred in the space of a quarter of a minute, and at the time I did not know that the President was shot, aithough, if I had tried to stop him he would have stabbed

I am now under one thousand dollars bail to appear as a witness when Booth is tried, if All the above I have sworn to. You may magine the excitement in the theatre, which was crowded, with cries of "Hang him!" "Who was he!" etc., from every one present.

In about fifteen minutes after the occurrence the President was carried out and across the street. I was requested to walk down to the police head-quarters and give my evidence. They then put me under one thousand dollars' bend, to appear at ten o'clock next morning. I then walked about the city for some time, as the city was wild with excitement, and then went to bed. At haif-past three I was called by an aid of the President, to go to the house where he was lying, to give another statement before Judge Carter, Secretary Stanton and other high officials assembled there I did so, and went to bed again. On Saturday 1 gave It was the saddest thing I ever knew. The city only the night before was illuminated, and everybody was so happy. Now it is all sad. ness. Everybody looks gloomy and sad. On that night the play was going off so well, Mr. and Mrs. Linceln enjoyed it so much. She was laughing at my speech when the shot was fired In fact, it was one laugh from the time the curtain went up until it fell, and to think of such a sorrowful ending! It is an era in my life that I shall never forget. Inclosed is a piece of the fringe of the flag the President was THE PLACUE-Collector Draper, of New York, has issued an order to the health officer of the port, to carefully inspect all vessels arriving frem ports in Europe infected with the

"POST HOSPITAL, FORT MARSHALL, Baltimore, Md., Feb. 20, 1834.—I have great estisfaction in stating that I have used 'The Samaritan Remedies' for Venereal Diseases in its most customary forms;
that I have used them with judgment, discretion and properly, and have found them to respond to my anticipation promptly and effectually. Enowing their composition, I have the fullest confidence in their efficiency, and as far as my use of them extends, I recommend them strongly.
